

Issue 63

ARMY ACQUISITION REFORM

12 September 1997

DESKBOOK ... HOOAH!!!

"HOOAH" is Fort Hood's Contingency Contracting Offices' (CCO) way of expressing thanks to Deskbook. The CCO and its personnel from 1st Cavalry Division, 4th Infantry Division and the 13th COSCOM deploy all over the world providing contracting support in places such as Haiti, Honduras, Kuwait and Egypt. The CCO uses the same regulations on deployments as the ones required to be used by the local contracting office, such as the FAR, DFARS and AFARS, loaded on its laptop computers. The annual cost to maintain 10 updated copies of these regulations by a commercial contractor was $7,800 of its total $10,000 annual operating budget.

A year ago, the CCO began receiving a no-cost subscription to the Defense Acquisition Deskbook, providing not only a large dollar cost savings but also time by not having to update the laptops with the changed regulations. The CCO shared copies with other contingency contracting offices who also now are regular Deskbook subscribers. According to Sergeant First Class Jerry Bost, a Fort Hood Contingency Contracting Officer, the no-cost subscription to Deskbook provides a service that is almost immeasurable. The on-line capability through the Web is unquestionably without comparison! On a recent visit to their Joint Program Office, I found everyone from the Program Manager to the team of hard working staff behind the scene to be very energetic, focused, and committed. Truly the office is setting the standard in joint training and cooperation between the services. Thank you -- "HOOAH" -- Deskbook for your support.